IF Hope doesn't support this year's Bobcat team all season long after the inspiring battle put up last Friday night then there's small gratitude for football players and coaches.

While Hope took its first defeat of the season the team looked great.

We were playing Fordyce—which I used to see come onto Rowland Field and blast El Dorado's football hopes year after year—and every fan present here last Friday night knows that the Bobcat team came within an ace of beating this powerful and veteran outfit, with a ten-year tradition of winning football behind it.

Except for a momentary flurry in the opening quarter, Hope met Fordyce on even terms—and in the third quarter outplayed the Redbugs.

And when this crack team bore down on the locals in a touchdown drive in the closing period Coach Hammons' men stopped them without a score.

I notice that the Young Business Men's association is holding a meeting at 7 o'clock Monday night at the Hempstead County Lumber company's offices. They want 150 football friends to be present. After that Fordyce performance we ought to double it, and turn out 300 strong.

November 2nd is the 200th anniversary of the birth of Daniel Boone—and the State of Kentucky will celebrate it.

Kentucky honors Boone because he fought and parleyed with the Indians until his fellow white men could pour in behind him from the seaboard and settle that great territory.

Arkansas, in 1936, will celebrate her centennial as a state. Her nearest approach to a Daniel Boone is James Bowie, who, tradition says, invented the bowie-knife, came through Arkansas and Hempstead county on his way to the Texas war for independence, and had some of his famous knives hammered out on a forge at Washington, our county-seat.

It so happens that Arkansas' centennial coincides with the 100th anniversary of the death of Bowie, who went down with David Crockett before the guns of the Mexicans at Fort Alamo.

Daniel Boone built Kentucky, you might say—while Bowie merely passed through Arkansas. But this is significant: Bowie opened up to all Americans the greatest trade route to the Southwest. The silent Indian hunter stalking through a wilderness has given way to shining motor cars whisking down paved highways.

But they traveled the same road—and our Arkansas Centennial in 1936 should be an occasion for capitalizing on the historical qualities of highway No. 67. We should erect monuments or plaques for the occasion, making our history as graphic as the traveler finds that of Virginia and Kentucky to be.

Hard Scrimmage Ahead as Bobcats Prepare for Spa

New Line Combination Will Be Given Thorough Testing

HEAVIER BACKFIELD

Hot Springs Trojans, This Friday, Hardest Game Thus Far

Three days of hard scrimmage is on the menu this week for Coach Foy Hammons' Bobcats in which a new line combination will be given a thorough test.

Moore and Hobbs, two big huskies who won the admiration of Coach Hammons in last week's game with Fordyce, will probably be starters in the combat with Hot Springs here Friday.

Moore will be run at guard with Hitchcock who will be switched over from a tackle position, giving the team a pair of heavy players in the center of the line.

Hobbs and Anderson will be tried at tackles with Kennedy and Hamilton at end positions. The new combination will add several pounds to the line.

A Heavier Backfield

Coach Hammons is also seeking heavier players in the backfield. Freeman Stone, 200-pound fullback and lineman, will see more action in the backfield due to his blocking ability.

Coach Hammons also was figuring on a way in which to use Spears, a substitute back who covered himself with glory in the Redbug game, leading the team with 19 tackles.

"Spears was in there hustling every minute, and stopped play after play. I'm going to use him more frequently in future games," the coach said.

Commenting on the coming battle with Hot Springs, Coach Hammons said:

"Although we may be considered the underdog for the first time this year, we're not conceding the Trojans a thing. The game is going to be tough, and a harder fought battle than the one with Fordyce.

"I believe the players will be more stadier with the new line combination, and the backfield ought to run more smoothly. Payne will have more experience at quarterback and Madison will be in better shape for the next game," the coach declared.

The Fordyce Game

Statistics from the Redbug game prepared by Mrs. Foy Hammons, wife of the coach, showed:

Tackles: Spears, 19; Holly, 14; Richards, 12; J. Turner, 11; D. Moore, 10; Madison, 8; Kennedy, 8; Payne, 8; Speedy, 8; Anderson, 7; Owens, 4; Stroud, 3; Hobbs, 3.

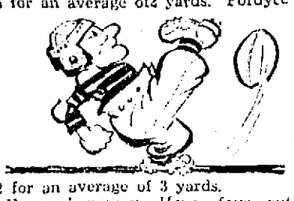

Total yards gained: Hope 246; Fordyce 259.

Forward passes intercepted by Hope, three for 5 yard gains.

Yards gained in returning kick-off: Hope 33; Fordyce 10.

Yards gained returning punts: Hope 55, Fordyce 15.

Average gain from scrimmage: Hope 26 for an average of2 yards. Fordyce

72 for an average of 3 yards.

Forward passes: Hope, four out of 10 for 49 yards. Fordyce two out of 10 for 27 yards.

Yards gained in scrimmage: Hope 104; Fordyce 207.

Yards lost from scrimmage: Hope 55; Fordyce 3.

Kick-off: Hope 3 for an average of 47 yards. Fordyce 2 for an average of 13 yards.

5-5-3 Navy Treaty Ends December 31

Restriction Opposed by Japan Is Likely to Be Abandoned

LONDON.—(AP)—Virtual termination of the Washington naval treaty and breakdown of restrictions on all capital ships on December 31 of this year was declared inevitable Sunday by an official source in close contact with international naval negotiations.

Japan is expected to serve written notice to the United States that it is renouncing the treaty as from that date. The United States, on receiving such notice, under the terms of the pact, would be required to notify the other treaty signatories, Great Britain, France and Italy.

Technically, the treaty would not actually expire until two years after notice of termination is served by any signatory.

But, for all practical purposes renouncement of the treaty on December 31, the earliest possible date, would mean the end of the 5-5-3 naval power ratio which it established, and which is so repugnant to the Japanese.

Rear Admiral Yamahoto of Japan is expected in London next week for the crucial Anglo-Japanese naval conversations. Norman H. Davis of the United States also is due to reach London next week. The purpose is to make arrangements for a general conference of the five powers, probably in April or May.

The British government will make an effort in preliminary talks with the Japanese to avert a breakdown of the Washington treaty at least until after the general conference. But well informed sources said the British government recognized that such efforts are doomed to failure.

Prosecution Will Speed Insull Trial

U. S. Fears Trend to Acquittal, as in Many Lengthy Cases

CHICAGO—(AP)—Prosecutors Sunday night said it might be necessary to hold night and special Saturday sessions on the Insul trial to get the case out of the legal trenches before next year.

Dwight S. Green, youthful prosecutor of Samuel Insull and his associates in mail fraud charges as a result of the collapse of the Insull utility company, said the case would continue for several weeks unless it was speeded up.

Twenty-six witnesses appeared during the first week of the trial for the government and Green will have 50 more on hand Monday when the trial reopens.

One of the longest trials on record here, that of J. Ogden Armour and nine other wealthy packers in the "beef trust" case in 1911-1912 saw a verdict of acquittal—that case lasted three months and 20 days.

Another marathon trial, the racketeering-conspiracy case against Dr. Benjamin Squires of the University

One of the many types of work financed, in part, by the FERA in its effort to provide for the unemployed, has been the encouragement of people with artistic ability. In carrying out this idea in some of the eastern cities, a number of painting and mural decorations, sculptures and theatrical productions were done with aid of the federal government.

The administration in Hope was able to get approved a project for paintings of historical scenes, for which the government pays a portion of the cost.

One of these has been completed by a promising young artist, Miss Madge Schooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Schooley of this city. The idea

Bert Waddell Admits Part in Robbery of Bank of Blevins

A circuit court jury at Washington Monday acquitted Jake Henry, negro, for the slaying three weeks ago of Mose Maxwell, another negro.

The case was the first of the criminal docket which started Monday morning.

Maxwell was shot at a railroad crossing near Sprudel, dying a few days following the shooting. Domestic trouble was blamed by officers for the killing.

Bert Waddell of Texarkana, one of three men charged with robbery and abduction, in the holdup of the Blevins bank last May 10 in which approximately $300 was taken, pleaded guilty. His sentence has not been fixed.

Roger Monroe and Will Green of Texarkana, also charged with the Blevins robbery, will go to trial separately. A jury was being selected at noon to try Green.

Monroe and Waddell were identified by bank officials following their arrest as the actual robbers of the bank, and Green is held on the accusation that it was his car which was used in the holdup.

C. C. Stephens, cashier of the bank and Earl White, a Blevins merchant, were abducted by the bandits and forced to accompany them several miles, being released unharmed. They walked back to Blevins and notified officers.

All three were arrested within three days of the holdup, Chief of Police Clarence Baker of Hope, and Officer Homer Burke of this city, playing a major part in the capture which was effected at Texarkana.

Officials at Washington indicated that Monroe would go on trial as soon as the case against Green is completed.

Testimony in the Green trial was being heard at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon with a possibility that the

Jersey Grand Jury Views Hauptmann

Judge Orders Indictment If Evidence Supports Murder Count

FLEMINGTON, N. J.(AP)—Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard Monday charged the Hunterdon county grand jury to indict Bruno Richard Hauptmann for murder if the state presents sufficient evidence that Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., met his death accidentally or intentionally at the hand of the German carpenter at the Lindbergh estate March 1, 1932.

The grand jury was to hear 23 witnesses summoned by the state.

Meanwhile, in New York, Hauptmann's attorney said he was prepared to introduce witnesses to show that the German was not present either at the kidnaping or the transfer of the ransom money.

Hauptmann's counsel was denied a motion for permission to examine the minutes of the grand jury that indicted the German on the extortion charge.

Rebels Strike Back at Spanish Troops

Dying Revolution Takes on New Life as Arsenal Is Captured

Copyright Associated Press

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Oviedo, seat of a huge government arsenal, was taken by the rebels Monday in a new outburst of revolt against the government which cropped out simultaneously at several points.

Reports from Barcelona said three towns on the outskirts of the city were in the hands of anarchists. Troops were dispatched to the trouble center.

Reports reaching Madrid also said troops were bombarding two towns in Asturias province, where the rebels are solidly entrenched.

Warships were bombarding Gijon, laying dow na barrage for the advancing troops. Reports said the rebels were armed with machine-guns and light artillery and were well fortoified.

The casualties were reported to be heavy.

MADRID, Spain—Catalonia's revolution for independence collapsed under a heavy bombardment of shellfire Sunday, and the Spanish government apparently was smashing down a three-day Red revolt that cost upward of 500 lives and 2,500 sacualties throughout Spain.

Leaders of the secession, including President Luis Cimpanys of Catalonia, were captured in a short-lived civil war and marched through silent crowds to a prison ship in Barcelona harbor, where they will be court martialed and probably sentenced to death.

They surrendered at 6:30 a. m., with Spanish destroyers and foreign legionnaires from Morocco converging upin the Catalonian political citadel.

Spain continued under martial law and vicious clashes with Socialist, Communist and Anarcho-Syndicalist rebels harassed government forces in the capital and over the nation. The government estimated 5,000 arrests had been made.

Rebels Reported Smashed

Asturias province on Spain's north coast was a center of revolt. Three hundred deaths were estimated there alone. Premier Lerroux announced that the army had routed the rebels, who fled into the mountains, abandoning their arms.

Sporadic firing continued throughout the day and night in the capital. At dusk heavy shooting was resumed in front of the Ministry of Communications, facing the Associated Press offices. Troops in steel helmets and full war regalia fired into the building from rooftops. There was a brush with snipers on the roof of the ministry, itself, and four were wounded.

Rebels finally fled through the streets before machine-gun fire. People leaned from windows of houses fronting upon the battle, cheering wildly.

Sunday morning a serious outbreak was reported at Gerona, 50 miles northwest of Barcelona. A general and four officers were killed by rebellious forces. Gen. Domingo Batet who caused the surrender of Catalonian forces, departed for Gerona at the head of a column of troops.

Barcelona, beautiful Catalonian city on the Mediterranean, was still far from quiet. One report said 200 had been killed in the night of fighting preceding the surrender. Other reports placed the deaths at no more than 30, with 100 or more wounded.

The waterfront was ablaze Sunday night with a huge oil fire, started when bullets struck gasoline storage tanks. Shooting continued virtually throughout the city at nightfall. It was particularly heavy near Socialist headquarters.

Government troops, though seemingly in control, were having trouble dislodging snipers from rooftops. It was guerilla warfare. Machine-guns were set up in the principal squares and streets, which were blockaded

"Dizzy's" Kid Brother Holds Battling Bengals in Check

Paul Dean put the St. Louis Cardinals back in the world series running Monday with a thrilling 4-to-3 victory over Detroit, beating Schoolboy Rowe, ace of American League pitchers.

The series now stands at three games each, the seventh and final game to be played Tuesday at Detroit.

Monday's victory was the second for Paul Dean, he having beaten the Tigers in the third game of the series, 4 to 1. "Dizzy" Dean, brother of Paul, holds the other win.

The Cardinals took the lead in Monday's game, scoring a run in the opening inning. The Tigers tied it up with a tally in the third, but the Cards went back into the lead with a pair of runs in the fifth.

Detroit again came from behind to tie the score with two runs in the last of the sixth.

The Cardinals' deciding run came in the seventh. Orsatti, St. Louis centerfielder, opened by flying out. Durocher, shortstop, doubled and then Paul Dean won his own game when he came through wit ha timely single, scoring Durocher from second base.

Dean held Detroit to seven hits, while the Schoolboy allowed the Cardinals 10. Rowe struck out five batters as compared with four for Dean.

Detroit won Saturday's game at St. Louis, 10 to 4, Eldon Auker turning in the victory. Tex Carlton started for St. Louis but was knocked out. Dazzy Vance went to his rescue but lasted only 1 1-3 innings. He was relieved by Walker.

In Sunday's game at St. Louis, Tommy Bridges gested the great Jerome Dizzy Dean, 3 to 1.

CCC Camps to Be Continued by U. S.

850,000 Men Have Attended, Drawing $136,000,000 in Wages

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — President Roosevelt intends to continue indefinitely the Civilian Conservation Corps phase of his recovery program. He made this known Sunday in a letter to Robert Fechner, corps director, acknowledging the latter's enthusiastic report on a recent visit to 125 camps in 10 Western states.

"I have been greatly interested and encouraged by the fine report from your visits to CCC camps in many parts of the country," Mr. Roosevelt said.

"This kind of work must go on. I believe that the nation feels that the work of these young men is so thoroughly justified and, in addition, the benefits to the men themselves are so clear that the actual annual cost will be met without much opposition or much complaint."

Fechner reported to the president last week that the cost of the CCC during its 18 months of operation had amounted to $443,000,000. Eight hundred and fifty thousand young men, war veterans and Indians received $136,000,000 in wages, of which $113,000,000 went to their families.

Slush Fund in 1932 Denied by Blackwood; Was "Forlorn Hope"

"I Knew I Never Had a Chance, But I Owed It to My Name to Make the Race," He Tells Audit Commission

LITLE ROCK.—Dwight H. Blackwood, former chairman of the State Highway Commission, who was a candidate for governor in 1932, appeared before a special session of the Highway Audit Commission over the week-end and testified that he knew nothing about contributions of approximately $18,000 to his campaign fund by highway employes, through the use of promissory notes and back salary warrants.

Testimony taken by the Audit Commission in May indicated that employes of the highway department, whose salaries were cut, received warrants for the back salaries, and that these were taken as payment on notes the employes had signed as contributions.

Blackwood was summoned as a witness in June, but was out of the state at that time. He has made several attempts since to appear before the Audit Commission. The meeting Saturday was called hurriedly and Blackwood testified for more than an hour.

After he completed his testimony, he talked at length "off the record," discussing political affairs during the Parnell administration.

"Didn't Buy Any Counties"

In his testimony, Blackwood said, in reference to his campaign:

"We didn't buy any counties. That runs into about $3,000 or $4,000 a county—I didn't have that."

The former chairman of the Highway Commission said that he knew that he had no chance to be nominated governor, "but I owed it to my friends, my family, and I owed it to myself, to get in."

There wasn't more than $10,000 spent in his 1932 campaign, Blackwood said, and he spent $6,000 of that. The constitutional limit of expenditures by a candidate for governor is $5,000 excluding traveling expenses.

Blackwood's Statement

Concerning the salary reductions, Blackwood said:

"Governor Parnell came to me—he did not go to the commission—he came to me and told me, asked me would I be willing to cut every employe I had if all other employes of the state were cut. I told him I would be. I was the first to be cut and every employe I had was cut. Nobody griped about it. We all took a cut and thought everybody else was taking a cut. In several months some of the boys working down in the bookkeeping department had access to the auditor's office and the treasurer's office and they discovered that all the other departments had gone back to the salaries where they had been before the cut—the governor, his secretary, all of them. The boys got after me to pay them their old salaries.

The "boys," Blackwood explained included about 15 or 20 men, and he promised them that if others had obtained their old salaries, he would see that the highway employes obtained the money also.

"Then came the campaign. I got into the campaign, I guess it was along in June, about June 15," Blackwood testified. "I wasn't in the department any more until after the election. When I went into that campaign, I went in to spend $8,000 or $9,000. I knew I wouldn't win, knew I'd get licked, but I owed it to my friends, my family and I owed it to myself to get in—I thought I ought to get in and do all the popping off I could.

"That would be the only way that my side of the thing could be presented. And I know, just as well as I know I am setting here that there wasn't $7,500 or $8,000 spent in my campaign that I didn't put in myself, I mean even what I put in and what everybody else put in.

"There's no indication that that much was spent; I knew some of my employes had contributed to my campaign; all employes always contribute to every campaign, always have and always will, but nobody contributed any twenty-odd thousand dollars, whatever the papers said I spent."

Pain in Feet Demands Careful Attention.

It is hard to get sympathy for painful feet, but there is no form of pain more disturbing. Everyone now knows the story of the man who wore tight shoes because his feet felt so good when he took the shoes off.

A pain in the foot may incapacitate you not only for work, but for play. Napoleon said that an army marches on its stomach. We realize, however, that it marches also on its feet and than an army with wornout feet, no matter how well fed, cannot proceed farther.

Sometimes a pain in the foot is due to an actual change in the tissues, that can be found by the X-ray. For example, spurs of bone will grow and irritate soft tisssues with which they are in contact.

Sometimes there are inflammations or infections under the membrane which covers the bone. These, when detected, may be controlled and the serious pain relieved.

The type of infection called osteomyelitis may affect not only the long bones of the body, but also the small bones of the feet. When it occurs in such places it may ge undetected for some time, and cause great damage before being properly treated.

After the cause of a pain in the foot is discovered, there are many common methods of treatment which are useful. Support may be provided by strapping with adhesive tape or with the new types of bandages.

Alternate bathing in hot and cold water is stimulating. Application of heat helps to relax the tissues and to bring enough blood supply to them to take care of their nutrition and of removal of infection.

Once the physician has discovered the mechanism that produces the pain and has controlled the factors that are controllable, a suitable amount of rest and the wearing of shoes which support the foot at its weak points will, in most instances, relieve the patient of further difficulty.

The care of painful feet involves, however, not only the minor understanding given by the physician to medical complaints, but also the understanding of the mechanics of the foot, both at rest and in motion.

In certain cases, however, it may be necessary by surgical means to remove spurs of bone to relieve collections of pus or infectious material between the bones and the soft tissues, or to open up and clean out areas of destruction within the bones.

Whenever there is strain on any ligaments at the points of attachment to the bone, swelling occurs. With this swelling there is tenderness and pain. In certain forms of flatfoot this pain is typical.

Some cases may be relieved by such measures as rest, bathing the feet in hot water and massage, but in the majority of cases it will also be necessary to provide supports to relieve the affected area.

Man's Lone Struggle is Depressing Tale —Thrown Into "Class War," eroH Aims High, Fails Low

By BRUCE CATTON

A book of disturbing power is the "Death and Birth of David Markand," a chronicle that soars empyreamward at times, then with startling suddenness plummets to the gutter.

One type of reader will find in Waldo Frank's latest book a work superion to his "City Block." Another type will be repelled by it, coming to the end weary and depressed.

An indefinable urge draws David Markand from his birth in New York as finance expert for a great corporation, while his business star is in the ascendency, away from his home, his wife, and his children.

Aimlessly wandering, searching for the peace that forever eludes him, he is bartender, stockyards worker, freight hustler, assistant editor of a farm guild newspaper, and bum.

Across the pages travels a constant procession of women, drawn to him by some strange force, his for a moment, then gone out of his life forever, a morbid horde, from surfeited rich women to the dregs of society.

Through the book runs a powerful current of thought and revelation bearing on the worker's struggle, a startlingly clear picture of the "class war."

The aim of the book is tersely told in its dedication, "to the American worker, who will understand."

YOUR CHILDREN

Chaperone Is Extinct, But Not the Problem

A lady asked what I thought of the chaperone.

"I'm serious," she begged. "There's more need for a chaperone today than ever. Honestly I never know where Dora is. She just says she is going out."

"Then," spoke the oracle, "it wouldn't be a bit of use to sleuth her with a duenna. If she won't tell you, she won't tell a stranger. And she would naturally give the extra escort the shake, around the first corner. Either that or her boy friend would give them both the air." I added this grimly because I'm a bit impatient with young fellows at the moment. They are so swaggering free to do as they like, and they think girls are too.

Will men never learn, or at least learn to care, that they have no reputation to lose, but girls have. Oh, yes they have. Don't think the world blinks when things happen, much more than it used to.

Society Still Judges.

A girl is not drummed out of meeting any more, or cut by the sewing society because she doesn't get home until three—that isn't it—but Conventional Society crystallizes opinion about its young women, and there will always be a Conventional Society whether we like it or not. Everyone is voted on eventually.

Young chaps know this even better than the girls do, yet they don't give a toot about it. They should worry. They're having a good time. I didn't tell my friend all this.

She said, "She is al right, Dora is, I know her so well. But when they go to night clubs where there is so much drinking and so on, I get worried somehow. I wish she wouldn't go. It doesn't do any real harm, I guess, but it doesn't do much good either.

Since the chaperone was beyond discussion as there isn't such a thing any more, and "Dora" refused to tell where she was headed for, I saw no answer at all.

"Times Have Changed"

What I believe to be the keynote to the whole theme is this matter of confidence between mother and daughter. Here I must also ascent the need of a mother to try to understand her girl, and the need of youth for a certain amount of excitement. We cannot expect spelling bees and singing societies to attract youth any more. The potent factor today is the trite, "Times have changed."

The motor car is responsible. Well, it is here—to stay. What then? Greater need than ever to foster confidence with understanding on both sides. More so than in hay-ride days.

One word to the girls themselves. Even though you consider your mother "narrow," please remember that we always apply that term to people who don't agree with us or our actions. It is important where you go, with whom you go, and what you do.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Your Neck Should Be A Thing of Beauty—It Shows Age More Quickly Than the Face

Long ago the most famous authorities on beauty realized and said that a smooth, white throat is one of the first requisites of charm and beauty. Modern cosmetics, a bit more practical perhaps, point out that the throat is the telltale of age.

"No matter how smooth the skin on her face may be or how bright and shining her eyes, one look at a girl's neck is enough for me to tell not only her age, but just how carelessly she has been doing her some beauty treatments," a famous diagnostician of complexion ailments told me the other day.

"It's unfortunate indeed, but a good many women who are particularly careful to preserve the freshness of youth in their faces, neglect their throats. After all, if her face needs certain oils, creams and lotions, there's no reason for a girl to assume that her throat doesn't."

Before you plan any new fall beauty routines, why not make it a rule to give your neck the same beneficial, careful attention you give your face? When you use cleansing cream, apply it upward from the base of your throat to your forehead. Do the same when using tissue cream, skin tonic or astringent and foundation lotion.

Remember that muscle oil goes far toward eliminating lines, fine wrinkles and sallowness. Clean your face and neck and then put a thin layer of oil on your throat. Using a patter or your fingertips, gently pat your throat for a few minutes. If you're really serious about the use of muscle oil, you might buy one of the new electrical gadgets with wooden handle and metal roller that gets warm. You simply rub the roller upward over the throat and face. It heats the skin, stimulating sluggish circulation —a prevalent cause of sallowness— and causing the oil to be absorbed.

While red ink is eating up the nation's big boxing clubs, including Madison Square Garden, one lone arena in the far west is writing in black.

The motion picture people have adopted Hollywood Post No. 43, American Legion, which conducts weekly shows in a neat little stadium accommodating 5000 persons.

A few years ago, when Jack Doyle had the beak busters booming along at old Vernon, Tuesday night was fight night in Los Angeles. Now Friday night is fight night.

Each pugilistic production is a big premier of the cinema. Flood lights play about the entrances. Expensive cars deposit rich cargoes of celebrities before the doors. Famous people come week in and week out. Autograph seekers chase them.

The Legion has had 17 successive sellouts. Frequently thousands are turned away.

The arena isn't pretentious. The roof and sides are of wood.

Big fight names aren't necessary. Fighters who fight satisfy.

"Two Next to Mae West"

The Hollywood American Legion Stadium started in the four-round days as a competitor of Doyle's old Vernon shed. There wasn't even a roof over the property then. Since then the Hollywood stadium has shown as much as $80,000 yearly profit.

Tom Kennedy, once a New York heavyweight, made matches there for some time. So did Tom Gallery, son of a Chicago police captain. Charley MacDonald is the incumbent.

But fights aren't the only lure. Stars and ordinary picture people exchange studio gossip over the backs of seats. Many of them pay little attention to what's going on half of the time. A band plays between rounds. Each week some prominent sports figure hops in the ring to be presented with a wrist watch.

Many telephone calls are like this: "Give me two seats next to May West." "No, you can't get them." "Well, how about a pair next to Bing Crosby?"

In and Out of Ring

Joe E. Brown is one of the mouthy favorites. A main event seldom starts without the crowd yelling for Joe. He usually responds. Each night he becomes funnier.

The night Lou Salica, the Brooklyn bantam, had Young Tommy, the Filipino, in the slag, Brown staged an impromptu wrestling bout with Eddie Cantor. Both were stripped nearly to their shorts—not shirts.

After that act, the crowd had its money's worth, and wouldn't have cared had Andy Ashcan been fighting Sam Stumble in the principal number.

It was at the Hollywood American Legion Stadium that Al Jolson took a poke at Walter Winchell.

Dick Barthelmoss seconded Enzo Fiermonte when Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick's handsome husband was knocked bowlegged by old Les Kennedy there the other night.

A bonus goes to the most entertaining preliminary performer. It works wonders. Nearly every preliminary is a miniature riot.

The Legion stadium used to be a testing ground for the larger Los Angeles Olympic. It no longer plays second fiddle. It's the big bass viol.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE. ©1934 NEA Service, Inc.

"You know," Mrs. Cathay said, "husbands would very frequently make fools of themselves were it not for the restraining hand of a wife."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, telephones the newspaper a report of the death of EDWARD SULLANGRY, private detective, believed to have been killed by "CINCINNATI RED" LAMPSON, gangster.

The same night an impostor, pretending to be FRANK B. CATHAY of Riverview, wealthy and prominent, is brought to police headquarters on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. With him is a girl who says she is MARY BRIGGS, hitch-hiker. Both are released.

Morden telephones the facts to his newspaper. Next day the real Cathay calls on DICK KENNEY, city editor of The Blade. Cathay claims his reputation has been injured, and demands damages and a retraction.

DAN BLEEKER, junior publisher of The Blade, hears the story from Kenney and Morden. Bleeker says, "There's something fishy about this," and sends Morden to Riverview to learn all he can about Cathay.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

DAN BLEEKER, junior partner and publisher of The Blade, turned to Morden, his police reporter. "I'm putting someone else at your desk down at headquarters," he said. "You get busy and chase down every lead you can get on Frank B. Cathay. Dig into Cathay's life with a spade, and dig deep. There'll be plenty there that he won't want to have brought out—there always is. The trouble with men of his type is that they pose as being altogether too perfect. They put up a front that isn't human. When you get back of that front you find a lot of stuff that nobody knows about. You get busy and find out."

"Yes, sir," said Morden.

"But don't spring any of it," said Bleeker. "You button it up under your hat and see that you keep your mouth shut. You get the information. As you get it, you bring it to me. You'd better make daily reports."

"Suppose they get wise to me?" Morden asked.

Bleeker's words popped out with the explosive force of firecrackers.

"Don't give a damn!" he snapped. "Let 'em find out. What do we care? Tell 'em what you're there for if they ask questions. Remember, young man, that this newspaper is back of you. Frank B. Cathay may be bigger than you are but, by God, the newspaper is bigger than he is! He's started a fight. All right, he's going to get a fight. Tell him so! Stand up and look him in the eyes and tell him that.

"WHATEVER you do, don't be sneaky. Don't get to skulking around corners, listening at key holes, peering through windows. Bust right in. You've got a job—it's a legitimate job. Frank B. Cathay is going to claim that his reputation is worth something and that we've damaged it. All right, the question of what that reputation is worth is a fact to be determined. It depends on a lot of things. You're going to find out those things. Don't be ashamed of what you're doing. Don't let anyone get you on the defensive. Do you understand?"

Morden nodded.

"You're engaged in a fight," Dan Bleeker said, "and there's a dignity about a fighter, as long as he stands on his two feet and fights. Remember this about, The Blade, young man. It doesn't snoop —it fights.

"And as far as Frank B. Cathay is concerned, don't make any bones about it. Attend meetings of his luncheon club. Mingle around in the city. Smile at him. Be cordial to him. But never forget the one fact that you're there to blast his reputation wide open. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir," said Morden.

"Can you do it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Get started, then."

ETHEL WEST, Dan Bleeker's secretary, was long-legged and languid. Her face held an expression of perpetual weariness which seemed due not so much to a disapproval of her environment as to the people who filled it.

She surveyed the woman before her with glassy eyes that stared in expressionless appraisal from behind spectacles.

"Your name," she said, "is Mrs. Frank B. Cathay. You're from Riverview and you wish to see Mr. Bleeker but won't explain the nature of your business. Is that right?"

The woman was expensively gowned and well kept; her manner regal, yet worried. Her face was nestled against the collar of a fur coat, a collar which had been carefully selected to set off the delicate oval of the face, when the face was held against the collar at just such an angle.

"Yes," she said. "Will you be so good as to tell him that I am here?"

Ethel West moved with slow deliberation.

"You'll have to wait," she said. "Will you be seated?"

Mrs. Cathay bit at her under lip. Then her face once more relaxed into perfect repose.

"Thank you," she said in a voice that was neither cordial nor grateful. She remained standing.

Ethel West strode into Dan Bleeker's private office.

"Mrs. Cathay is out there," she said.

Bleeker looked up at her with a swift frown.

"Alone?"

"Yes."

"What does she want?"

"She won't tell me."

"What does she look like?"

"She's about 30. She has lots of money and she's spent a lot of it on her appearance. She's got one of those schoolgirl complexions. She hardly ever moves her facial muscles. Her eyes are nervous. She's trying to make a good impression. She's wearing a fur coat with a big collar; she looks better in it when she's standing up. She started to sit down and then changed her mind. She thinks perhaps you might come out to see her, instead of letting her come in to see you. She's standing up so she can make a good impression."

"Fat?" asked Bleeker.

"No, she's got a perfect figure and the coat displays it to advantage."

"Show her in," said Bleeker.

MRS. CATHAY entered the office with short, quick steps. From the moment she reached a point from which she could command a view of Dan Bleeker's desk her eyes were wide, showing to advantage the long lashes. Her head was held slightly to one side against the big collar of the coat. Her lips were curved in a perfectly arched smile.

"Mr. Bleeker!" she exclaimed. "It was so nice of you to see me and so nice of you to see me so promptly. I know what a busy man you are."

Dan Bleeker didn't get up Ethel West pulled the door shut behind her as she returned to the outer office.

"Sit down, Mrs. Cathay," said Dan Bleeker.

"I wanted to see you about my husband," Mrs. Cathay said.

"Yes, of course."

"Oh, did you know I was coming?"

"No, but I naturally assumed that was what you wanted to see me about when my secretary said you were in the office."

She squirmed about in the chair, settling herself with a slight gesture of the shoulders, a quick twist of her head. Her eyes, a deep hazel, were smiling now.

"You know, Mr. Bleeker," she said, "husbands would very frequently make fools of themselves, were it not for the restraining hand of a wife."

Bleeker surveyed the woman with acid eyes.

"I'm a bachelor, myself," he said.

She gave a low nervous laugh.

"And," went on Bleeker, "you can cut out the preliminaries and get down to business."

"My husband," she said, "is a man of very strong will."

She paused and Bleeker said nothing.

"At times he's quite impulsive. That is, in his rages, you know. He reaches some decision on the spur of the moment when he's real mad about something and then he's too proud and obstinate to back up."

She seemed to snuggle into the fur coat with a quick squirming motion. Her head, tilted to one side, rested against the high fur collar. Her eyes, as well as her lips, smiled intimately at Dan Bleeker.

Mrs. Cathay makes an unusual request in the next installment.

Contest in Runoff Election Is Legal

Procedure Same as in First Primary, Supreme Court Holds

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The right to contest the results in runoff primary elections was upheld Monday by the Arkansas Supreme Court in its refusal to grant Lloyd LaFargue a writ to prohibit Circut Judge W. J. Waggoner from trying a suit brought by Sheriff C. C. McAllister of Arkansas county, runnerup to LaFargue in the recent runoff election.

The court held that Act 38 of 1933—the runoff primary law—was amendatory to previous primary election laws, and that the right of contest is present in runoff elections as well as first primaries.

The supreme court affirmed Union chancery court in determining that M. P. Matheny was entitled to $4,006 as attorney for the board of Improvement District No. 23 of El Dorado. There were some deductions in the total fee, reducing it to about $3,400.

Other cases decided Monday included:

Louisiana Oil Refining company vs. Everett Scroggins, Arkansas circuit, affirmed.

Arkansas Foundry company vs. American Portland Cement company, Little River circuit, reversed and remanded.

Things you may not know about your TELEPHONE

● The telephone had its birth 58 years ago in a makeshift research laboratory, where Bell watched a tiny straw attached to the eardrum from a human skull trace wavering lines on smoked glass. Since then, the history of the telephone has been told in the countless scientific problems solved.

● Bell Laboratories, "research department," has contributed developments that led to transcontinental telephone calls, 1800 pairs of wires in a single telephone cable, 4 simultaneous conversations over one long distance line, countless other inventions to help keep costs low to the user.

● Entirely as by-products of this research, the scientists employed at the laboratories have invented an artificial larynx for persons deprived of speech by throat operations, produced many aids for the hard of hearing, and developed equipment for sending pictures over wires.

Inventions of the research scientists at Bell Laboratories have been devoted, not to swelling profits, but to improvements and economies that have aided this company in giving good service at a fair cost to the telephone user.

This policy has been adopted in the belief that, as much from your standpoint as from our own, it is sound and workable. It is based upon the feeling that in an undertaking planned like the telephone service for the long pull, what is best for the telephone user is in the end the course that will bring us the surer, more enduring success.

If life is hard for me, then I shall need
Courage around me like a coat of mail,
And grim determination for my steed.
If life is trying, surely I should fail
Without a sword of laughter always near
And constant songs within my heart to guard
Against the jeopardy of doubt and fear.
And I must weep few tears if life is hard.
If life is easy, always must I be
Watching lest smugness and complacence creep
Around my soul till they envelop me—
While some know not where they will eat or sleep.
If life is easy, I must often say,
"God, send me something hard to do today."—Selected.

A solid carload of newsprint arrived in Hope Monday for The Star, 20 tons of paper in 71 individual rolls.

The Star consumes 40 tons a year, usually, shipped in two carload lots, one in the spring, and the other in the fall.

The paper that arrived in Monday's car, if stretched out in a single sheet would reach 213 miles, or about as far as from Hope to a point about 60 miles this side of Memphis.

It would completely "paper" an 80-acre farm.

Azana and Dencas Escape

The fate of former Premier Manuel Azana, one of the leaders of the secession, was still uncertain. Apparently he had escaped, along with Minister of the Interior Dencas and former Police Chief Arturo Menendez.

Those arrested, beside Companys, included the president of the Catalonian Parliament, Senor Casanovas, and Mayor Charles Puisunyer, former minister of industry and commerce. Government employes belonging to the Left Republican party also were arrested.

The surrender itself was dramatic. General Batet's artillery forces bombarded the principal buildings of the city from 4:30 a. m. to 5:45 a. m. At 6:30 Companys rushed to a radio and announced he was giving up.

"I was unable to resist further and not wanting to cause unnecessary sacrifices I hereby surrender to Gen. Domingo Batet," he declared.

General Batet announced:

"After an intense fusillade the Catalonian president, realizing resistance was futile, telephoned me to cease fire, but the rebels had cut the wire and I was unable to suspend the fighting immediately.

"Finally, at the risk of my life, I succeeded in stopping the hostilities. Despite those still on the roofs and terraces we are in control everywhere. The president of the Madrid government thanks the Barcelonia army and I add my personal felicitations."

Fair enough—

FROM time to time we tell you facts about Chesterfield Cigarettes.

We say that Chesterfields are different from other cigarettes—that the tobaccos are different, the paper is different, and the way they are made is different.

Everything that modern Science knows about or that money can buy is used in making Chesterfield a milder, better-tasting cigarette—a cigarette that Satisfies.

You can prove what we tell you about Chesterfield. May we ask you to try them —that would seem to be fair enough.

Strictly on their merits

the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

SO THEY SAY!

Perhaps you will say that when our money has been devalued we can bring it up again. That is impossible once it has no longer any value. You cannot revive the dead.—Gaston Doumergue, Premier of France.

Decentralization does not mean that industry will move from Chicago to the Tennessee Valley or from New England to California. It does mean that the workers will be gradually taken from the tenements in the crowded sections of the city and moved to the periphery of metropolitan areas.—Henry R. Harriman, President U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

GRIDIRON BRIEFS

The University of Arkansas smashed Texas Christian university 24 to 10 last week-end at Fort Worth, continuing their march to a second consecutive Southwestern championship.

The University of Texas overthrew Notre Dame on the latter's own field at South Bend, Ind., 7 to 6; and Rice shocked Big Ten football fans by trouncing Purdue 14 to 0, at LaFayette, Ind.

The famed California teams went down unexpectedly, Southern California lising to Washington State 19-0; and the University of California dropping a 7-0 decision to St. Mary's. Stanford, however, beat Oregon State 17-0.

In Arkansas high school football, El Dorado and Little Rock, both of whom meet Hope later in the season, went down to defeat. El Dorado was beaten by Haynesville 13 to 0; and Little Rock lost to Byrd High school at Shreveport by the same score.

Hot Springs, which is Hope's opponent this Friday, won decisively over Jonesboro last week, 52 to 7.
